A Runaway Wife is Found in Midland College, Atchison.

Conductor Hayden Gets the Clyde Mattox Reward.

OTHER STATE NEWS.

Large Store and Warehouse Burned at Bavaria.

ATCHISON, Oct. 9.—W. W. Tryon, a stenographer in the office of the Review of Reviews, in New York, who has been a wife for some time, found her in Atchison Saturday. She was taking a special course of music at Midland college, and was going under the name of Miss Myrtle Tryon, having entered the institution on Thursday last. It appears that Mrs. Tryon, who is about 35 years of age, and about thirteen years the junior of her husband, left her home in New York, last May to attend the golden wedding of her parents at Vermillion, South Dakota.

Tryon received notice some time ago that she was about to return home, but this was followed in a few days by a second letter, written at Omaha, saying she did not love him, and would not return to live with him. She did not mention her plans for the future, or give her address, but Tryon at once started west in search of her. From relatives in Dakota, he learned that she had gone to Atchison, Kas., to consult C. H. Meyer, a musician, with whom she had been acquainted since she was a girl.

He departed at once for Waterville, only to find upon his arrival there that she was in Atchison. He came here and found her at Midland college. Before Mrs. Tryon would agree to return with him, she wanted the advice of Meyer, the Waterville friend, who, by-the-way, is blind. He came here Saturday afternoon, and the three had a conference at the Union Depot hotel. Meyer, upon his arrival here, failed to adjust the domestic difficulties of the Tryons. Meyer seemed to think Mrs. Tryon needed protection from her husband, and the husband thought Meyer was in the way.

Tryon called in J. E. Telford and Meyer sent for B. P. Waggoner. In addition to these attorneys, Sergeant Donahue got mixed up in the case. An amicable settlement was finally reached, and Mr. and Mrs. Tryon departed for Omaha, and Meyer went home.

The excitement of Saturday afternoon and evening was too much for Mrs. Tryon, and she had quite a severe fainting spell. She is subject to hysterical spells and her husband attributes her desire to leave him to some such influence. She admits he has always treated her kindly.

EXONERATED AFTER TWENTY YEARS

A Convict Confesses, Showing That J. T. Holmes, of Wichita, Was Innocent.

WICHITA, Oct. 9.—Twenty-two years ago J. T. Holmes of this city, who at that time was postmaster, was convicted in the United States court at Topeka, of stealing registered letters, and was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. Eighteen months later Holmes was set free at the intervention of a friend who paid the shortage, and whose pleadings almost convinced the authorities that he had been wrongfully convicted, but during all these years Holmes has been unable to disprove the charges of theft.

Today he received the proof in a letter written from the Lansing, Mich., penitentiary by King Price, which completely exonerates him. Price was a clerk in the office at that time, and admits that he stole the money. Price is in the penitentiary for counterfeiting.

GOT THE MATTOX REWARD.

Judge Reed Decides that It Belongs to Conductor Hayden.

WICHITA, Oct. 9.—Judge Reed today decided that Conductor Steve Hayden of the Missouri Pacific was entitled to the reward offered for the recapture of Clyde Mattox, the murderer who broke jail here the night he was convicted. Sheriff Royce offered $300 and the government offered $500 for his capture.

Hayden found Mattox on his train near Yates Center and wired Royce, who in turn instructed the Yates Center officials to arrest the criminal. The officers claimed the reward, but Judge Reed ruled that they were only agents of Sheriff Royce and that Hayden was the supreme information which made the arrest possible.

SALINA, Oct. 9.—A destructive fire occurred at Bavaria which will be a serious blow to the town. The large store building of Hawley Bros. and warehouse adjoining were totally destroyed, as also the contents of both buildings. It is supposed that a lamp exploded and caused the fire. Hawley Bros. carried an insurance of $35,000 on their stock and grain in the warehouse. The building was owned by H. W. Lawrence of California, and was insured for $1,500. The building and warehouse were worth $5,500.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION.

Ex-President Higgins Delivers an Address Which Meets With Little Favor.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 9.—At today's session of the International Typographical union, ex-President Higgins, of the local typographical union, delivered a speech upon the per capita tax question, but it was not received with much favor. An amendment was offered that the time of the meetings be changed from the first Monday in October to the first Monday in September. The principal argument in favor of changing the time was that the weather would be better in the northern cities where the majority of the conventions will be held. This caused a heated debate, resulting in the defeat of the amendment.

The next question of importance was that of changing the per capita tax according to the earnings of the men. It was decided to leave the matter with the local unions. The question as to how to expose these unions that were in arrears in the membership dues was also argued.

I was decided to publish them in the Journal.

The convention adjourned at 12:30 until Wednesday morning.

The delegates were driven this afternoon to the school for the blind. This, with one exception, the only place in the United States where publications for the blind are printed, and the visitors looked forward to the visit in the nature of a treat.

HERR MOST AS AN ACTOR.

"The Weavers" is Played to a Packed House in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—"Die Weber," ("The Weavers"), a historical realistic play, in five agonizing acts, by Gerhart Hauptmann, the apostle of dramatic realism, was performed at the Thalia theater last night by Herr Most and fifty anarchists who had never acted before. The house was filled, packed, crowded, jammed; the audience fairly stuck out at the doors and windows, and the applause was tremendous.

The object of this performance was to raise money for the literary fund of the anarchist society of New York—to help Herr Most's paper, Die Freiheit. The performers had carefully rehearsed their parts, and with true anarchistic fervor had mastered the woes of the characters in the play until they almost looked upon them as their own.

The acting was remarkably good, but nothing else could have been expected, for they were reciting upon the stage, the grievances that they have for years been shouting in meeting hall and when they demolished the residence of their employer they probably did it with a secret satisfaction that was not set down in the book.

The play opened in the delivery room of Herr Dressiger, the merchant whose clerks were paying the weavers the pittance that they had earned. Herr Most was one of these weavers and when he acted upon the stage there was a loud roar of applause. His make-up was excellent. In his tattered garments and his shaggy gray wig, the gray hairs of his own true whiskers he came slouching upon the stage with a strange blending of weary fogginess and doggedness.

Throughout the first act the weavers told the merchants' clerks of all the suffering they had endured in the week just passed. In the second act Herr Most and two other actors went through the whole catalogue of human woes, from leaky roofs through which the rain poured and heartless landlords to starvation and the diseases that come from poverty.

In the third act the whole crowd assembled in a tavern and piled up a list of grievances against their employer that was positively frightful. In the fourth act they went to his house and smashed everything they could lay their hands on, particularly the mirrors, the demolition of which seemed to give them a fiendish pleasure.

In the fifth and last act they went to a neighboring town, fought with the soldiers, killed a weaver by accident and demolished another manufacturer's home.

TRAVELERS' HOME.

Corner Stone of the Commercial Travelers Building Laid Today.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Oct. 9.—The corner stone of the Commercial Travelers Home of the United States was laid today by the Masonic grand lodge of New York, Grand Master John Hodges officiating. The home as projected will cost $125,000. The structure will be five stories high with a basement.

The prevailing style of architecture will be Persian. The building will be surmounted by a tower and on the east side will be an observatory overlooking the park. The size of the building will be 175 feet on the principal front and ninety feet on the left side.

A WONDERFUL MEMORY.

A Chicago Railroadman Who Can Remember Car Numbers.

"Memory is a gift that seems to be very unevenly distributed," said G. L. Blackwell, a Chicago railroad official. "We have a man in the employ of our road who is blessed with the most wonderful memory I ever heard of. It is the duty of this man to keep account of the different cars as they come into the yard. When a train whistles he steps out on the platform, without either book or pencil, and takes a mental note of the cars as they go by. If any one happens to be standing near him at the time he is thus engaged he does not hesitate to enter into conversation with him, and when the train has passed he steps back into the office and makes a complete and accurate record of the train, beginning at the first car and ending with the caboose. Sometimes, just to test his ability, the men would get him to begin at the caboose and write the numbers the other way, or else begin in the middle of the train and work both ways. In any case he never has made a mistake that I know of. Car numbers, the names of the roads to which they belong and their relative positions in the train would always be recorded accurately."

THE BISHOP'S CIGARS.

He Smoked the Before, After and Brotherly Brands.

A man in clerical garb and with a handsome face walked along a Chicago street, looking at the show windows until he came to one which contained cigars and pipes, and such stock as a cigar dealer would display. The man in clerical garb and with a handsome face walked into the cigar store. He examined several brands and bought several. After the purchase the cigar man said to one of his loungers:

"That's Bishop—of—church. He thinks I don't know what he is up to. I have a friend who knows the bishop's home life, and he told me about him and his cigars. Now he bought three brands here. One was very light, the second very heavy and the third is a cigar that you or I wouldn't buy unless we had to. I am told that the bishop calls them his 'before,' 'after' and 'brotherly.' The first he smokes just before he goes at his ecclesiastical work whatever it may be; the second he puffs leisurely after his work is over and the third he gives to the visiting clergy who like to smoke. So you see the old yarn about carrying two kinds of chewing tobacco has a counterpart in high life."

English View of Christian Reunion.

President Lincoln used to tell this story: A friend of his came to him one day, saying, "Me and wife have quarreled." "Indeed, how so?" asked Lincoln. "She wants the house painted red. I want it white." They parted to meet a fortnight later. "How's your quarrel?" asked Lincoln. "Settled," said the friend. "And how have you settled it?" "Compromised it," was the answer. "Well, how have you compromised it?" "The house is to be painted red."

Cardinal Vaughan's "reunion" reminds us of this sort of compromise. "There can only be two cases of reunion, so far as doctrine and authority are concerned: Compromise—that is, federation and mutual recognition—and submission—that is, individual or corporate absorption. The first is inconsistent with the divine constitution of the church. There remains only the second." The cardinal may consider that reunion and absorption are the same thing. But then he proposes to absorb, not to be absorbed.—Westminster Gazette.
